

PROMINENT FARMER IS SADLY BEREAVED

MRS. G. S. BAKER PASSES AWAY AFTER SHORT ILLNESS MONDAY EVENING

A weakened heart, caused from the strain upon her system from a nervous breakdown was the immediate cause of the death on Monday evening last of Mrs. G. S. Baker, one of the well-known farmers of our district.

Mrs. Baker, who was in her 44th year, was taken sick only three weeks ago, but despite every care and attention which medical skill and special nursing could give, she gradually sank, and passed away at about ten o'clock in the evening.

The funeral is to be held this (Wednesday) afternoon at 2 p.m., at the late home of the deceased, on the farm some six miles north-east of town, the Rev. W. Huston, pastor of the United Church, conducting the services both there and at the grave side in Wainwright cemetery.

The late Mrs. Baker, who was formerly Miss Ada Greenwood, was born in Ontario, on June 15th, 1887, and was married in Orillia, Ontario, in 1912. Since coming to Wainwright in 1916, she has been identified with her husband in practically every good work for the uplift and betterment of the district, and the advancement of the community. An earnest church worker, she was connected with the former Methodist (of later years the United) church, and at all times was foremost in the necessary work along church lines. Other organizations which have profited by her interest and association were the Wainwright Agricultural society as well as the local branch of the Women's Institute.

She leaves a sadly bereaved husband as well as two daughters—Marion and Myrtle—and a younger son. Her aged mother (whom we regret to learn is also ill at present) has lived with her for some long time. One brother, Alton, who arrived here with his wife last week, and the sister, Mrs. Arthur Daniel, of Somerton, Arizona, are also left to mourn the loss and to all of these sorrowing ones we extend the deep sympathies of a far-flung circle of friends and acquaintances at the early death of a beloved wife and mother.

CHARLESWORTH

IS COLONIZATION

CHIEF FOR SOUTH

EDMONTON—L. C. Charlesworth, chairman of the provincial government's irrigation council and deputy minister of water resources, has been appointed also to the office of colonization manager of the Lethbridge Northern and New West irrigation districts, and will at once take up his new work. As colonization manager he will succeed James Pike who has filled the office for the past six years.

The reorganization of the irrigation administration accompanying this change in management signifies the putting into effect of the Wilson commission's report on the Alberta irrigation systems, as presented to

MEDICAL CLINICS

AGAIN TOUR ALTA.

WILL VISIT NEW DISTRICTS ONLY DURING PRESENT YEAR ITINERARY

EDMONTON—Traveling clinics will be sent out again this summer by the provincial department of health on the same basis as in previous years. Itinerary arrangements are now in course of preparation by the department, together with such details as personnel and general character of the work to be done.

It is expected that the season's programme will be commenced at the end of May or beginning of June, continuing until the end of September. New territory not covered in previous clinics will be mapped out for the itinerary, although in some cases it will closely adjoin districts that were served last year or the year preceding. A large number of requests for clinical service have been received from all parts of the province.

Mental hygiene clinics will also be continued in the three centres of Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge. These are in charge of Dr. C. F. Fitzpatrick, under the direction of the provincial commissioner, Dr. C. A. Hanger.

HIT BY MOTOR BIKE,

WOMAN BADLY HURT

Crashed into by a speeding motor-bike ridden by Wm. Panter, Corona hotel employee, Mrs. Murphy, 17 Arlington apartments, suffered a fractured arm and other injuries as she walked across Jasper at the 103 street intersection at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday.

According to a report made to Constable J. A. Smith, city police, Mrs. Murphy was walking north, just west of the intersection, while Panter was coming west. Mrs. Murphy, who is now in the Misericordia hospital, hesitated a moment as she saw the bike, and then stepped back again, to be knocked down by the motor-bike. She is an aged lady, almost 70 years old, and is the mother of Rev. Father Murphy, who was former parish priest of St. Luke's church, Wainwright.

FORMER WAINWRIGHT

OIL-MAN SUCCESSFUL

WAINWRIGHT-WEST LTD., GETS BIG PRODUCTION IN TWO TEXAS WELLS

The Wainwright-West Oil, Ltd., operating in the Western Canada oil area, and headed by P. D. Bowlen, of Calgary, and formerly of Wainwright, as president, brother of John Bowlen, M.L.A., for Calgary district, has made an auspicious entry into the new big East Texas oil fields by completing its second monster gusher its Rusk County No. 2, for an initial open flow gauge of around 7,000 barrels daily of 40.7 gravity oil.

The Wainwright-West only recently entered the new East Texas area, now computed to be one of the great oil potential oil reservoirs the oil world has ever produced. In the short space of a few months, Mr. Bowlen has completed the No. 1 Rusk County well for a production also approximating 7,000 barrels daily; the No. 2 Rusk County well as mentioned, and is erecting derrick and installing drilling equipment on a newly-acquired lease three-quarters of a mile north of the famous Bateman gusher that came in about last Christmas for an initial flow of some 25,000 barrels daily. This lease also adjoins the Magnolia property—Texas Standard subsidiary, upon which the Magnolia recently completed a gusher for the initial flow of around 28,000 barrels daily.

Mr. Bowlen stated that his oil is going to Canadian interests through the Southern Refining Company. The Sinclair Consolidated Company is running the oil from the Wainwright West Company wells.

"3 LIVE GHOSTS"

DYNAMIC LAUGH

SIDE-SPLITTING COMEDY IS ADAPTED FROM LONDON STAGE PLAY

In the picture this week at the theatre which of course is all-talkie three British soldiers escape from a German prison camp and return to their former haunts in London only to learn that they are legally dead in the eyes of the government and their friends.

One of them, an American, foiled in his hope for death on the battlefield to explode a mine he had committed in his native land, finds him self the object of a search by the police.

The second member of the trio has lost his reason, a victim of shell shock. He m'nd clears following a blow from a policeman's club and he discovers he has kidnapped his own child!

The third wages a battle of wits with his gin-soaked step-mother, who dazed by the reward offered for the American, conspires to bring about his arrest.

These are some of the fascinating and colorful highlights of this picture of the famous New York and London stage.

Brilliantly acted by an all-star cast several of whom have never before appeared before a camera "Three Live Ghosts" introduces several new and magnetic personalities to the screen as its absorbing story unfolds. Prominent among them is Beryl Mercer, who, as "Old Sweetheart," a product of London's slums, gives one of the finest characterizations ever seen on the screen.

All of the ingredients necessary to make a successful motion picture are to be found in "Three Live Ghosts" which is 100 percent entertainment value.

N. S. KENNY APPOINTED NEW TOWN SECRETARY

Minutes of the regular meeting of the Wainwright Town Council held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday last.

Present: Mayor Forster and Councilors Robinson, Clifton, Petrie, McLeod, Huntingford and Welch.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and on motion adopted as read.

The Mayor thereupon declared the regular order of business suspended and presented the following motion sponsored by Councillor Welch: That this Council place on record their sincere regret in the loss sustained by the town of Wainwright in the death of our late secretary-treasurer, Henry Yale Pawling, who, in that capacity, has served the town faithfully and efficiently for more than fifteen years; that this Council extend their deep and heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Pawling and family in their great bereavement and that the secretary be requested to prepare a suitable letter of condolence to be forwarded to Mrs. Pawling over the signatures of the Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer.

This motion was adopted unanimously after which the members of Council stood at attention and in deep silence for a period of three minutes in honor of and in respect to the memory of the late secretary-treasurer.

The Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, minister of the interior, Ottawa, wrote signifying the willingness of his department to present a mounted buffalo head to the town of Wainwright for hanging in the council chamber to replace the one destroyed by the fire of 1929, and requesting shipping instructions.

Moved by Coun. Clifton—That the Secretary acknowledge the generous gift with thanks, convey to the department of the interior the desired shipping instruction and file the letter—Carried.

A request was presented from the Wainwright branch of the Canadian National Recreation League, over the signature of Messrs C. E. Callas, secretary-treasurer and J. E. Alderman, president, seeking from Council the use of the old rink site for use as a softball diamond during the coming summer.

Moved by Coun. Welch—That the local branch of the Canadian National Recreation League be granted the use of the said lots for the purpose mentioned, subject to the sale of the said lots, on payment of the nominal rental of $1.00 as a safeguard against claims for damage which might be made on the municipality—Carried.

A communication was received from the department of neglected children for the province of Alberta, relative to one Jack Byron who had reverted to the care of the province some years after being taken from the care of the province by adoption.

Moved by Coun. Robinson—That this communication from the department of neglected children be held over pending further information from the province—Carried.

COLE OF FARM FIRES DURING WEEK

R. J. ROBERTS & J. FITZPATRICK BOTH SUFFER LOSS BY CONFLAGRATIONS

On Monday evening last, while a concert and dance was in progress at the Crescent Hill schoolhouse, Mr. J. Fitzpatrick had the misfortune to lose the whole of his home and contents.

The farm home is at Fabyan, just opposite the school mentioned, and Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick with their children were at the dance at the time. Someone noticed the flames through the thick brush and bush, but only after the fire had got great headway, and practically the whole gathering rushed to the scene only some 400 yards away.

It was then found, however, that nothing could be saved as by that time it was a roaring inferno, and the heat so great that it was impossible to get close to the place. Fortunately the children were with their parents at the school, and no stock was injured.

The loss is indeed a heavy one for Mr. Fitzpatrick, as all that the family have saved of their home belongings is the actual clothes they were wearing at the time of the fire.

We understand that some insurance was carried, although the extreme loss just at this time of year is all the more pitiable.

On Saturday afternoon, the barn belonging to Mr. R. J. Allen Roberts on the farm he recently purchased from the J. Church estate, caught fire and was only saved from total destruction by the efforts of his neighbors.

It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were away with the two eldest boys at the time, two younger children being left home.

Practically as soon as it started the fire was noticed by Mr. Tom Sheridan and Mr. A. Kohl, and these ran up other neighbors and within a short time a large amount of help was on the spot to render assistance. The buildings there are somewhat close together, and several times a large barn caught fire also but hard work by those there, and a handy lake close by kept this from destruction, and after several hours work they got the upper hand.

A large amount of hay and feed in the fire made it a hot one, and the heat hindered the fire-fighters. A number of them kept watch all night to keep everything secure on account of the straw and litter around the yard. Some insurance was carried, but without the plucky fight by his neighbors, Mr. Roberts' loss might have been a very severe one indeed.

KING GRATIFIED AT WELCOME EXTENDED LORD BESSBOROUGH

OTTAWA—Gratification has been expressed by King George at the welcome accorded the Earl of Bessborough and Lady Bessborough on their arrival in Canada. A cable received by the Governor-General reads as follows:—

"I sincerely thank you for your telegram and am delighted to hear of the warm welcome which you and Lady Bessborough everywhere received. I much appreciate your kind inquiry about my health."

POSSIBLE TO BUY LAND UNDER ACT

HODLEY EXPLAINS PROVISIONS OF NEW ALBERTA STATUTE

EDMONTON—Settlers from other provinces who wish to acquire land in Alberta will still be able to do so under the terms of the new Land Act and will not be subjected to any hardship, it was stated by Hon. George Hodley, acting premier, in reply to a query as to protests made by the Native Sons of Canada, Vancouver.

Areas where settlement has already largely taken place are to be filled in and their settlement completed, lands in such areas to be sold at nominal prices of $1 and up per acre. These areas will be surveyed and put on the market, and other lands will be similarly dealt with in the future under conditions as may be afterward determined.

The provisions for purchasing apply only to lands set aside for that purpose, Mr. Hodley pointed out, and their settlement can be completed only by more people coming from outside.

Free homestead privileges serve a different purpose, however, the acting premier went on to show, and the government makes no apology for holding them in such a way as to give the benefit to native sons of Alberta. No homestead lands are to be had in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and those in Alberta are to be reserved in the interests of those most and chiefly entitled to them.

400 ALTA. TEACHERS SWELL UNEMPLOYED

NO RESTRICTION ON PUPILS PASSING THROUGH NORMAL GIVES OVER-SUPPLY

EDMONTON—Completing the most trying year in the history of the teaching profession of Alberta, the Alberta Teachers' Alliance finds itself for the first time with a total membership in excess of 3,000 and an active enrolment of 2,614, according to the report of Secretary J. W. Barnett, presented to the fourteenth annual general meeting of the alliance.

"It has been a year of trial and stress to teachers as well as to farmers and business men," the report reads. "For the first time in our history, the supply of teachers seems to have got beyond control, the spectre of actual want has appeared in our midst, and the end is not yet."

The report of the retiring president, B. D. Webb, of Calgary, dealt with the problem of over-supply of teachers, reporting the finding of a recent conference in Regina as follows:—

(1) Economic conditions on farms, which induced many farmers' wives with teaching qualifications and experience to resume teaching.

(2) An over-supply of teachers owing to the fact that there had been no restriction placed on the number admitted and passed through Normal schools.

In connection with the first statement, it was stated that in one Alberta inspectorate the survey showed that one-third of the teachers at the present time were wives of farmers.

It is estimated that the teachers out of employment in Alberta number more than 400 with an additional 1,000 now in training in provincial normal schools.

Rumor has it that Miss Lilius Boyd and Mr. E. E. (Gene) Tory entered the matrimonial state at the week end in the city. A fuller report will appear next week.

WEDDING BELLS

CARGILL-WHITEHEAD

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Saturday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m., at Holy Trinity church, when Irene Alice, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitehead, 8263 120 street, Edmonton, became the bride of Mr. John Dundas Cargill, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cargill of Chauvin. Rev. G. G. Reynolds officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was daintily gowned in pale blue satin, fashioned on long lines and wore a French imported veil arranged in cap style. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Miss Adeline Dundas of Wainwright, niece of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid and wore a gown of pale pink crepe with picture hat to match Mr. Norman Cargill attended his brother as best man.

After the ceremony a dainty supper was served to relatives and a few intimate friends, for which the table was covered with the wedding cake and decorated with daffodils.

Mr. and Mrs. Cargill will reside in the Chauvin district.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN THE HEART OF IRMA

DESTROYS BUSINESS BLOCK ON MAIN STREET EARLY ON MONDAY MORNING

SOME GOODS SAVED

STRENUOUS WORK BY BAND OF VOLUNTEER WORKERS REDUCES SPREAD

IRMA—Causing a loss estimated at $55,000 the worst fire known at Irma since 1911 destroyed seven buildings in the business section of the town early Monday morning. The fire, caused by over-heated stovepipes broke out at 1:30 a.m. in the sitting room and dining rooms of the Irma hotel. Fanned by wind the flames progressed rapidly and by 3:00 a.m. had spread to adjoining buildings while the hotel was still ablaze.

Aided by chemical equipment and many volunteer fire fighters, the town's fire brigade put up a strong fight against the rapidly spreading fire which was given impetus by high wind.

Most of the loss suffered is covered by insurance. There was little salvage, the buildings were burned and their contents being practically a total loss except for most of the post office furniture, all of the mail and part of the drug store equipment. A few personal effects were saved from the hotel which was completely razed.

The chief losses incurred are estimated as follows: Irma hotel, owned by T. W. Shaw and run by L. Hager, building, $4,000; contents, $3,500; ice cream parlor, building owned by R. W. Love, $1,500, contents owned by James Pond, $1,500; drug store building, owned by H. Long, $2,000 and contents owned by W. N. Erickson, $1,000; Alberta government telephone building and Great War Veterans' building, $800; telephone equipment $2,500; Irma pool hall and barber shop owned by James A. Hedley, with contents $6,000; Nuway store building owned by H. Long, $3,000; and stock $22,000; and post office and fixtures owned by C. Knudson $6,000.

Mrs. D. MacDougall and her son who live over the ice cream parlor had a narrow escape from death barely escaping with their lives from the flames that enveloped the building.

Mail and furniture were removed from the post office with little loss also some stock from the drug store. Through the "preventive efforts of volunteer workers the bank building several residences, McFarland's general store, the garage and theatre all of which were in danger from the fire were saved.

Monday morning's fire is the most serious that has occurred in Irma since 1911 when the business section was wiped out by a disastrous blaze. Work of rebuilding will commence immediately. All losses are said to be covered by insurance except possibly those suffered by Mr. Long who was out of town.

CURTAIN ENTRANTS TO NORMAL SCHOOL

ATTEMPT TO BALANCE NEEDS OF PROVINCE FOR NEW TEACHERS

EDMONTON—Urging steps be taken to curtail the number of entrants to Alberta Normal schools during the coming year, together with recommendations to deal with the situation of former teachers who have returned to the profession after several years absence, resolutions dealing with the teachers unemployment problem were presented to the Thursday morning meeting of the Alberta Teachers' Alliance convention.

The resolution dealing with Normal students petitions the government to raise the Normal entrance requirements to Grade XII standing; raise the age of girls entrants to 18 years; lengthen the period of training and generally endeavor to maintain a fair balance between the number of students admitted and the possible requirements for teachers.

The second resolution requests that the certificates of all teachers who have been out of the teaching for a period of five years or over and are returning to the work during the present period of depression and who have necessarily been unable to keep abreast of changing advances within the profession be required to take a refresher course before resuming teaching. Otherwise their certificates will be suspended.

"SAY WHEN"

"One, two, one, two, kick!" shouted Sammy Martin as the chorus again went into motion. "Don't forget that break in the refrain! One, two, one, two—now—the break!"

Scattered about in the semidarkness of the theatre sat the principals of the cast. In the box seat a slender girl was talking quietly to Larry Hill the leading man. Gladys Bennet, was the stars only understudy, her heart was centred in the success of the show. In an aisle seat near the orchestra pit Harry Marks, the producer sat beside John Dale, who had written the libretto of the musical comedy.

"Sammy doesn't seem to be doing so well with that number," remarked Dale, his eyes upon the chorus at work on the stage. "I'm getting worried, Harry."

"I'm not worried about Sammy Martin," said the producer. "He's the least of my troubles. He's worked with me before. Give him three more rehearsals and he will have those girls stepping off their numbers like clock work. It is the principals that are worrying me."

"Why what's wrong with them?" asked Dale in surprise. "I have not noticed anything."

"It is Joyce Day," said Marks. "She is just walking through her part. We have been rehearsing for two weeks and she went up in her lines in the second act yesterday." The producer glanced about him, striving to peer through the semi-darkness of the theatre. "She is not here yet—and rehearsal was called for one thirty."

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked Dale. "Isn't she satisfied with it?" Marks laughed grimly. "She'll be after you to rewrite the whole book if she does not think she is getting all the breaks. I am afraid of Hill, too. You have given him a light-comedy juvenile role and he is going to 'mug' it to death; he always does."

"I'm afraid I don't get you, Harry. Remember, this is the first show that I've been actively connected with; all my work has been along the novel and short-story line. What do you mean by 'mug' or whatever it is?"

"Mugging? Why, that means that he's going to make faces and overact every chance he gets, and if he does Day is going up in her lines. She's a temperamental idiot when she thinks some one is trying to kill one of her speeches." Marks shook his head. "She's probably lurching with young Keen Farnsworth again today. The boy doesn't realize it, but he's letting her make a fool of him."

"Is he in love with her?"

"He thinks he is, but I doubt it. I can't say very much, though. As you know, John Farnsworth is backing the show—and the boy means every thing to the old man."

"Yes, I realize that," said Dale, thoughtfully, as he continued to watch the chorus go through the number. "Just how does that little Bennet girl fit in the picture? I haven't been able to figure that out yet."

"Gladys Bennet? It's a funny situation—and when I say that I don't mean there's any big laugh in it for me. From what the old man tells me, Keen used to be quite crazy about the girl and Farnsworth still likes her quite a lot. Farnsworth refused to back the show unless Gladys had the star part, so I had to agree."

"Then what's Joyce doing in the cast?"

"Simply this. I don't believe that the little Bennet kid can handle this part; I'm afraid to open with her playing the lead. We're handing the old man a lot of bunk. When he drops around to see a rehearsal I let Gladys take the part and he's satisfied. When he's not here Joyce plays the leading part just as she will down the woe."

"What are you going to do if Farnsworth gets wise?" demanded Dale.

"There will be the dickens to pay. But I've got a lot of money of my own tied up in this thing too, and I'm not taking any chances of the show being a flop. Joyce steps in when we open and it will be too late for Farnsworth to kick very much then."

"So the old boy is pulling the 'angel' stuff with the little Bennet girl?" remarked Dale.

"You would think of that," Marks grinned. "You're all wrong John. The way I get it, Farnsworth was an old friend of Gladys' father before he died. He knows the kid's heart, is centred on the stage and he wants her to get a break. I have a sneaking idea that he wouldn't be hysteric with grief if his son fell in love with the girl."

"Then Farnsworth's not so hot on this infatuation of Keen for the leading lady?"

"You said something. The old man is no fool. He knows that Joyce is playing the boy for his money." The piano and the chorus ceased abruptly as the man who had been sitting across the aisle from Marks and Dale got quickly to his feet and moved down so that he stood just beyond the orchestra pit. He was tall and gray-haired and seemed to be very much in authority.

"Let that number go now, Sammy," he called. "We won't wait any longer for Miss Day." He turned and glanced behind him. "All right, Harry?" "Sure," called Mark. "Go ahead Ed. You're directing the show."

"O.K." The director turned again to the stage. "Everybody on stage!" he called out loudly. First-act people only. He glanced at the box at his right. "Miss Bennett, will you run through Miss Day's part, please?"

The piano player started the opening notes of a tender little love song as Larry Hill and the fat comedian disappeared. Gladys Bennet sighed and shook her head as she came slowly down stage and began to sing. As she finished the verse and started the refrain the chorus came dancing out from the wings.

There was a faint flutter and a whiff of strong perfume as Joyce Day finally made her appearance, hurrying down the aisle to where Sprong, the director, stood.

"So sorry to be late," she said as she reached him. "Don't you think I had better do that number myself?" she smiled. "Not that Miss Bennett isn't capable, but there's no need of her bothering to go any further now that I'm here."

"Rehearsal was called at 1:30 prompt, Miss Day," said Sprong impatiently. "It's nearly three now."

"I know," said Joyce as Harry Marks strolled down and stood near by. "But I've been lunching with Keen Farnsworth. I'm sure Mr. Marks understands."

"Certainly," said Marks quickly. "I guess it's all right this time, Ed."

"Now listen, Harry," Sprong's voice was impatient. "If you want me to stage this production every one must be on time for rehearsals—including Miss Day."

"Oh!" exclaimed Joyce angrily. "I'm tired of these scenes—this constant argument. If it happens again I—I'll walk out!"

"Now, Joyce," Mark's tone was pleading. "Don't say that—the show can't open without you." The producer frowned and shook his head as he caught the director's eye. "I'm sure Mr. Sprong did not mean to offend you."

"Of course not," said Sprong quickly. "I'll ask Miss Bennett to let you take the role at once."

"Thank you," Joyce's tone was very cold and polite.

Sprong glanced at the stage. Gladys Bennet and the chorus were just finishing the number they had been going through while the others were talking.

"That's fine, Miss Bennett," the director called. "Miss Way is here now. I'm sure you won't mind if she takes the part herself."

"Not at all, Mr. Sprong," said Gladys.

Joyce had already started toward the stage. Her smile was just a trifle forced, it seemed to Gladys, as she passed the leading lady at the stage door.

The girl dropped down in one of the seats in a stage box. She sat there watching all that went on about her. Gladys did not like the trick that the whole company was pulling on Keen's father. He had always been nice to her, treated her almost as though she were his own daughter. It was not quite fair to John Farnsworth to make him believe that she was going to be the leading lady in the show when she wasn't going to be at all. Secretly Gladys wished that she might be able to play the part all of the time, not just when John Farnsworth came to rehearsal and at intervals, such as the one that had just passed, when Joyce had failed to appear.

As she sat here Gladys found her thoughts dwelling upon Keen. He was such a nice boy and they had had such good times when they had been together in college. Then they had drifted apart. Keen had gone into the banking business with his father in New York and Gladys had spent two seasons with a stock company in the west. At first, there had been letters, many of them, and then the times that she heard from Keen grew less and less frequent and at last ceased altogether. The girl had been too proud to write, for she felt that the boy had lost all interest in her.

Now, after two years, Gladys had come to New York and succeeded in getting a part in "Say When." The producer of the show had brought John Farnsworth around to one of the first rehearsals in the hope of getting the banker to take a financial interest in the production. Then Keen's father had discovered that the daughter of his old friend was a member of the cast. He had been delighted and had told Marks that he would back the show if Gladys were given the leading part.

Keen's attitude had hurt Gladys. They had been such good pals during his college years, but now it was so different. They were still friends—good friends—but Gladys knew that the old companionship was gone. Keen had changed in those two years since last they had been together. He had become lost in the glamour of Broadway and its people.

Gladys realized the change in the boy far better than he did himself. She knew that he was madly infatuated with Joyce Day, and the knowledge was not easy to face, for Gladys had found that deep in her heart she loved Keen Farnsworth. It had been her love for the boy that had made her willing to go through with her part in regard to the deception of the Ider Farnsworth concerning the leading lady of the show. Inwardly she rebelled against the idea of tricking John Farnsworth, yet she knew that by doing so she was pleasing Keen; and, after all that mattered most to her.

Gladys sighed as the rehearsal progressed. Then she suddenly brightened as a tall and good-looking chap dropped into a seat beside her.

"Hello, Keen," she said softly. "Lo Glad," said Keen in an undertone. "How's it going today?"

"Fine," answered Gladys, her eyes upon the stage, where Joyce was going through a little love scene with the leading man.

"Joyce certainly puts that part over, doesn't she?" There was a note of admiration in Keen's voice. "She's a great actress!"

"Wonderful!" said Gladys softly, trying to keep a faint hint of bitterness from her tone.

She knew that Joyce was not making any effort to play the part as it should be done. She was merely speaking her lines and making very little attempt to act. Her work was uninteresting, stilted.

"You know Glad," said Keen softly "sometime, when you've been on the stage as long as Joyce has, you may be able to play a part as well as that!"

"I wonder if I will?" Keen did not detect the faintly scornful note in Gladys' voice.

"Of course you will," said Keen earnestly. "I'm sure of it."

"Thank you," Gladys smiled at him and then she grew serious. "Keen, I don't like this trick that we are all playing on your father."

"What do you mean?"

"The way I always take Miss Day's part when he comes to a rehearsal." "Oh, that," Keen laughed. "No harm done at all. Dad has quite a crush on you, you know; your father and mine were such good friends."

"That's just it," said Gladys. "And it's because of that friendship that I hate the idea of deceiving him. Keen, wouldn't it be better if he knew just what was going on?"

"Of course not," there was a note of alarm in Keen's voice. "You must not even think of anything like that. Glad why, that might make Dad so angry that he would refuse to back the show—and then we'd all be sunk."

"And you think it's fair not to tell him?"

"Yes, it's quite all right," Keen smiled, his eyes upon the stage. "Besides I promised Joyce that I wouldn't tell him—ever!"

"Oh, I see," Gladys found it hard to speak.

Keen seemed to have only one thought and that was Joyce. He was willing to deceive his father, to let him be tricked as he was being now, merely because the leading lady had asked Keen not to say anything.

"You must promise me not to say anything to Dad," said Keen "Will you, Glad?"

"All right," said Gladys softly. "I promise."

"Fine," Keen laughed. "I'm sure we all want the show to go over with a bang. I know that, Joyce can put it across!"

Before Keen more than half realized what had happened the girl had left the box and rushed through the stage door to seek the seclusion of the underground passageway and there give way to tears.

Keen frowned. He did not understand Gladys at all lately. She had always been such a good little pal. Her idea of telling his father about the deception that the company was practicing alarmed Keen. That would never do. He forgot the girl for the moment as he heard the director speak.

"Can't you put just a little more life in that scene, please, Miss Day?" Sprong demanded. "You are supposed to be heart broken when you learn"

Today Genuine Value receives its Just Recognition

Owing to their popularity,
the present models of 1931
McLaughlin-Buick Straight
Eights will be continued
throughout the coming summer and fall.

WHEN men gather in home, club or office, and the conversation turns to motor cars, there are always words of praise for McLaughlin-Buick. These are times when careful thought is given to important expenditures—times when genuine value, such as McLaughlin-Buick offers, receives its just recognition.

Hence McLaughlin-Buick is winning more than fifty out of every 100 sales of eights in its price class—with 14 other makers sharing the remainder. Any company may have a good year, may catch the public's fancy through some one point or other—but McLaughlin-Buick cars must be better or people would not be buying them in such unrivalled volume.

the man you love thinks you've deceived him.

"Just what would you like me to do, Mr. Sprong?" demanded Joyce cooly, as she came down to the foot lights.

"Act!" answered Sprong tersely. "I don't like to be finding fault all the time, but you're just walking through the part."

"Wait a minute," called out Marks as he came hurrying down the aisle to where Sprong stood. "Put Gladys in the part, quick. Farnsworth's secretary just phoned and said that he had left for rehearsal."

"I'm very glad of that," said Joyce glaring at Sprong. "I'm not in the mood for argument today!"

"This idea of changing the lead every time Farnsworth comes around is going to ruin the show," said the director impatiently. "But you're the boss, Harry."

"Good, then put Miss Bennett in the part."

"Miss Bennett? Somebody call Miss Bennett," shouted the director. When John Farnsworth reached the theatre a few minutes later the rehearsal was again in progress and Gladys was playing the part of the leading lady.

"Everything is going fine," said the producer. Miss Bennett is getting better and better in the part all the time."

"Splendid," said Farnsworth with a pleased smile. "I was sure Gladys had talent if she was given an opportunity."

"You were quite right," said Marks hastily. "Don't you want to sit down and watch the show for a while?"

"Certainly," Farnsworth's expression was very thoughtful as he caught sight of his son. The latter was sitting close to Joyce, his eyes upon her face and listening eagerly to every word that the leading lady said. Apparently they were both oblivious to the presence of any one save themselves at that moment.

Farnsworth frowned. He was afraid that Keen might lose his head over Joyce Day, might even marry her, and he felt that would never do. He had thought that by giving Gladys a leading part in this show he might revive his son's interest in the girl, but apparently his plan had proved futile. The older Farnsworth realized the only thing he could do was wait and hope that Keen would tire of the leading lady.

As further rehearsals continued things grew more and more difficult. It was Harry Marks and Edward Sprong who found more to worry about in the situation than any one else concerned. So engrossed was Joyce with the constant attentions which Keen paid her that she displayed even less interest in her work than before. She continued to go through her part in a casual, indifferent way. The result was many stormy scenes with Sprong—verbal battles during which both the director and leading lady threatened to walk out and leave the show. Each time they were persuaded to remain through the pleading of Harry Marks. It was not until the night of the dress rehearsal that the situation reached a climax. Marks had been right in what he had said about Sam Martin's work with the chorus. They now went through their routine like clockwork.

An hour before the start of the rehearsal all of the cast had reached the theatre. Most of them were ready made up and dressed ready to go on. Tonight the theatre was different than it had been during all the weeks of rehearsal. Now there was an orchestra in the pit and the cast was already to go through the show just as it would be presented to the public the following evening. The stagehands were at work. The electrician's crew was ready and waiting for their light cues. In the audience sat a few friends of the producer and the cast who had been invited to attend the dress rehearsal.

Harry Marks came hurrying back to where Sprong stood in the wings just a few moments before the rehearsal was to start. The director wore an anxious expression upon his face. He looked at the producer nervously.

"Well," he demanded abruptly. "What did you do about old man Farnsworth? Will he be here tonight or not? We put Joyce in the part and really got this show into shape?"

"We're safe," said Marks with a smile. Gladys Bennett is taking care of Farnsworth. She has told him that the dress rehearsal won't be until tomorrow afternoon. He believed her and is taking her to dinner and then to a show. So there's no danger of his being around here tonight. It sure would spoil things if he was!"

At a flash of a light near his stand the orchestra leader started the overture with a wave of his baton. Three minutes later they swung into the introduction of the opening chorus and the curtain rose on the first act of "Say When."

Both the producer and director had moved out front and they now sat in the lower box, watching tensely.

At the finish of the opening number there was a bit of dialogue between Ted Green and Larry Hill.

Then Joyce came on and promptly forgot her lines.

"She's terrible!" remarked Sprong softly, his eyes upon Joyce.

Harry Marks did not answer. He was mentally losing all the money invested in the show.

The dress rehearsal went on, but it moved haltingly. More than once Joyce forgot her lines, and there were pauses, that, in the actual performance would have been painful. As time passed the leading lady grew worse and more nervous.

The rest of the principals, and there were a number of them besides Larry Hill and Ted Green, were becoming unmoved by the leading lady's faulty performance. Before the first act was more than half over, Sprong had rushed backstage and from the wings he halted each scene that did not go smoothly and had the actors run through it again.

It was nearly 3 in the morning before the second act came to a halting close. Sprong was wild. He blamed everything upon Joyce, and Marks was forced to agree that the director was right.

As the final curtain went down Sprong rushed out on the stage to where Joyce stood smiling as though she felt that she had given a splendid performance.

"This is the worst thing I've ever seen in my life!" shouted Sprong glaring angrily at the leading lady. "Miss Day, I thought you could act. If we play the show like this when we open tonight it will be the worst flop that ever moved from Broadway to the storehouse."

"Don't you like my acting, Mr. Sprong?" demanded Joyce cooly.

"Acting?" exclaimed Sprong. "Do you really call it that?"

"That's quite enough," said Joyce her eyes flashing as she turned to Marks, who now stood behind Sprong. "I'm through, Mr. Marks! I wouldn't go on with this show for all the money in the world. I've never been so insulted in my life!"

"But—" stammered Marks.

"Never mind pleading with me, the actress said impatiently. 'Nothing you can say will make me change my mind. I won't play in this production, and if you don't like it you can see my attorney in the morning.' Her tone was scornful. 'Good night, gentlemen!'"

Joyce turned and started for her dressing room. Keen, who had hurried back stage at the end of the act met her in the wings.

"Joyce!" he exclaimed "what's wrong?"

"I'm quitting, Keen," she answered. "I can't stand such treatment as this. 'But Joyce, what about the show? I hoped that you would put it over—for Dad's sake. He has a lot of money tied up in the production, you know.'"

"Please Keen, don't bother me now," said Joyce hastily and she smiled at him appealingly. "See me tomorrow at my hotel, dear boy. Now I'm too excited and angry to think of anything—but I won't go on with the show!"

Keen nodded as she moved away. He felt that she might have gone through with it for his sake, for the sake of his father. He was beginning to wonder if Joyce was quite as glorious as he had thought her to be. She appeared to be a good bit more self-centred than he had realized.

"And that's that," said Sprong to Marks. "If Joyce Day wants to walk out, I don't try to stop her, not after the performance she gave tonight."

"Nor will I," said Marks. "But what are we going to do, Ed?"

"There's only one thing that we can do, Put Gladys Bennett in the part."

"What? Why, you're crazy!" exclaimed the producer. "You mean to say you're willing to let that kid open cold tomorrow night with the few rehearsals she's had?"

"Yes, and I think she can get by all right. She knows her part, anyway!"

"Good!" said the producer, and then he shook his head. "They say a rotten dress rehearsal usually foretells a good opening performance. I hope they are right!"

It was the opening night of Harry Marks' latest production, "Say When." Already the theatre had begun to fill with the usual first-night patrons that make a Broadway opening such a colorful affair.

Back stage the callboy was already rushing about, knocking on dressing-room doors and giving the first call for the overture. All of the cast were in a frenzy of excitement. They were all very nervous for they felt that the whole success of the show rested upon the slender shoulders of Gladys Bennett and they were afraid that she might fail.

The girl realized how much depended upon her, knew that by doing her best she would be helping the man who had been so kind to her—and the father of the boy she loved. She had made up her mind to put her part across or die in the attempt. So intent was she upon that one thought that she did not give herself a chance to realize the slightest bit of stagefright.

Keen stood in the wings as she rushed up from her dressing room. He caught her hands in his as she reached him.

"Look, Glad," he said softly. "I'm rooting for you!"

"Thank you, Keen," she whispered as she heard her cue coming from Ted Green as he made his exit.

Gladys made her first entrance, smiling vivaciously, spoke her first lines and then began to sing her number.

Harry Marks was standing beside Keen now in the wings, watching and listening tensely.

"She's good!" he said, half to himself. "If only she can keep it up!"

Gladys was good. She was putting all of her heart into the part, bringing out everything that there was in it. Her role was that of a timid, love sick, schoolgirl, and Gladys was giving a remarkably clever and finished performance. From her first number the audience was with her, finding something new and satisfying in her fresh young charm and beauty.

By the middle of the first act Marks was in a very excited state.

"She's a wow!" he murmured to John Farnsworth, who sat beside him in the back of the house. "She'll have Broadway eating out of her hand before the piece is playing a week. We have got something in this show—and that little girl is putting it over with a bang!" The producer turned smilingly to Farnsworth as Gladys made her exit. "Listen—hear the hand they are giving her. She's a riot!"

"I hoped she would be," said Farnsworth quietly.

All through the performance Keen stood there in the wings watching tensely. He suddenly knew that she was very dear to him. He had found Joyce in a very disagreeable mood that morning, and now he realized that his infatuation had been a very foolish thing. Joyce had but one thought in life and that was herself. But Gladys—she was different. He did as want her to make good—wanted it more than anything in the world. He felt that she was doing so now. They had always been such good pals.

The performance went on at a swift pace. Now, in spite of the faulty dress rehearsal, the opening was moving with exceptional smoothness. The others in the cast evidently found Gladys' pep and ginger contagious, for they, too, were getting everything that they could out of their parts. Larry Hill had caught the tempo from the girl and he was playing his role with a deft, whimsical touch that bore no trace of the exaggerated facial expression which Marks had feared when he had spoken of the leading man's inclination for "mugging."

The show ended in a riot of applause. "Say When" looked as if it were going to be one of the biggest musical-comedy hits of the season. "Glad," exclaimed Keen as he caught the girl coming off stage. "You're wonderful!" Then suddenly, before either of them quite realized what had happened, he held her close in his arms and raised doting kisses upon her lips. "I love you—I love you!" he murmured.

Gladys had forgotten everything save that she was in Keen's arms and that he was telling her that he loved her. Nothing else mattered now. He loved her—he loved her. "What's this?" remanded a voice from behind them.

Keen quickly released the girl and turned to find his father standing there smiling at him.

"I love her, dad," said Keen quickly. "I guess I've always loved her, but I've been such an idiot that I did not realize it before."

"And I love him too," said Gladys shyly. "So much."

"Knowing that only adds to my delight at your success tonight, Gladys said Farnsworth. "I knew that I was right when I insisted that you be given the leading part in this show."

Gladys and Keen looked at each other intently, and each knew that the other would not tell John Farnsworth how close he had come to never seeing Gladys play the lead in "Say When."

"You were wonderful," exclaimed Sprong as he came hurrying up to where the others stood, with Marks close behind him.

"Glorious!" said the producer with a faraway look in his eyes. He was mentally making money.

And it was a very angry leading lady by the name of Joyce Day who read the glowing write-ups that the critics gave the opening performance of the musical comedy "Say When."

THE JOYS OF HOME OWNINGOh, the supreme satisfaction of a home that is just right! A home where everything is where you want it and as you want it. Where, if you don't like it as it is you can change it to please yourself.You don't have to beg the landlord to change the hideous paper that gets on your nerves. You don't have to fight the janitor to get the house
warmed up. You don't have to wait until June or July to get your spring
cleaning done.If you own a home you can do with it what you will, when you will.
If you build it yourself you have all the fun of planning it to suit your family needs and tastes and all the joys of having it to your liking when done.You can have flower boxes in your windows and water them when you please without fear of protest from a tenant downstairs.You can even, if you have a yard
of your own, shake a rug out the back door without hearing a wild yelp of rage from someone whose open windows have taken in your dust.You can, if you are the lady of the house, move the furniture all overthe place and make as much noise
as you please, or put it all out on the porch while you clean, and nobody calls you names.You can actually put a new room
on the house somewhere, or turn the porch into a room, if you own a home. You can paint it whatever color you like, and you can run a vine over it or plant a tree beside it and no one can say nay.You can sit on your glassed-in porch at an evening, in the most comfortable chair in the place, your family around you, the radio tuned
in, and watch your flat-dwelling
neighbors go off to the stuffy movies
night after night because they're so tired of the four walls of their tiny,
but high-priced kitchenettes.You can put in a brightly colored bath room if the wife gets the prevalent color craze and your finances permit. You can do over the attic and make it into the most delightful play ground for the children. Almost anything you wish for the home, you can manage—if you own the home.So much of it you can do yourself.
A built-in cabinet here, a few shelves
under the stairs, a brand new idea of your own in the way of, say, a combined shoe, hosiery and hat box built into the bedroom—delightful little conveniences everywhere about the house. You can have a workshop in your own basement, or garage or attach, where you can make things or experiment with things.This is the joy of owning a home
—to do with it what you like—to care for it, to guard it well, to use
it, to enjoy it, to love it.

STATISTICS

If it is true that figures "never lie," it is equally true that they very frequently mislead. There are, for example, the figures of the employment in Canada compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The Bureau, as such organizations are judged, is accounted thoroughly efficient yet nothing could be more futile than an endeavor to sum up employment conditions on the basis of its statistics.Some seven thousand employers report monthly to the Bureau. Among the seven thousand so reporting there is today probably 30 per cent more employment than there was six months ago. Where men and women are working six days and in some cases getting a bit of overtime as well. But these facts are not shown in the records.Nor is the fluctuation of white collar labor, farm labor or day labor
given any consideration. The Dominion figures cover only a small section incompletely. The one obvious fact is that we have a great deal of unemployment, and that we would have had much more but for the already reasonably successful efforts of the Bennett Government to stimulate industry in commerce in Canada.The programme in that direction
which was launched by Premier Bennett, will be carried to a conclusion
during the regular session of Parliament which will commence next month.Next fall and winter should put
to a very practical test the merits
of the Bennett policy in the face of

THINK THIS OVER!

Mr. H. G. Moody, editor of the Redding (Calif.) Searchlight, says:
That business men and citizens
generally should not fail to realize that newspapers are in the public service; that they are not parasites living for their own profits and that the community needs for a newspaper are such that, should there be no newspapers as a private enterprise, then the public must for its own good tax itself to provide them.Too often we find business men
regarding their home newspaper
patronizingly as an institution that gives off their largesse; something that they are privileged to forget if the times are dull and may recall to mind in those richer days when profits are large.The newspaper is a function, a con-cordant, reciprocating service in the community it lives in, an integral factor in everything it helps to motivate, hence is as worthy of its life
as the judge in his dock, the sheriff or the tax collector. In fact, as a community institution, the newspaper is far more embracing than any or all; it is the completed expression of the daily
round of life, without which we would have to return to the chaos
of disorganized society.Such facts are recognized by advanced persons but sometimes ignored by the ignorant or the indifferent. They aim to keep the newspaper
"in its place" by withholding a just tribute. They have their own inferiority complex to deal with and their only object is a kind of self satisfaction that comes from retarding
the wheels of progress.These opponents of printed enlightenment usually demonstrate that they need the inoculation of the very spirit that makes a newspaper.
While they are keeping the newspaper
in its place they are keeping themselves there also. Their backwardness
will be indicated by their tenacious
clinging to outworn practices, outmoded establishments, slow conceptions of competitive requirements.Let the community that wishes to step ahead make its newspapers the staunchly supported banner carriers
of its forward movement. The newspaper gladly undertakes the challenge to leadership and invariably will push onward against every obstacle. The only time the newspaper weakens is when those it serves are weak.

TO DECIDE VALIDITY
COMPULSORY POOLOPPONENTS GRAIN MARKETING
ACT CONTENT PROVINCE
NO JURISDICTIONREGINA—When the Saskatchewan
court of appeal convened, the validity
of the Saskatchewan Grain Marketing Act of 1931 was the question before the court, and counsel supporting and opposing compulsory pool
were present prepared to defend or attack the legality of the legislation.
"Had the legislature of Saskatchewan jurisdiction to enact the Grain Marketing Act, 1931, and, if not, in what particular or respect has
it exceeded its power?"This is the question which the Saskatchewan Court of Appeals will be called upon to decide. It must rule whether or not the act, which provides for 100 per cent grain pool,
is within the power of the legislature
to enact.
It is generally understood that
those counsel in favor of the act's
validity will base their contention
on the plea of civil and property rights. These come within the jurisdiction of the provinces.

A Water Drop

"TWENTY Thousand Leagues
Under the Sea" is out of date.
Scientists are going a pace never heard of before in the history of the world. They tell us that the temperature of the flame at the surface of the sun is ten thousand Centigrade, that Sirius, the brightest star, sends out a temperature of eleven thousand, Vega, fourteen thousand, according to the astronomers' instruments. But man has outdone the stars and the sun. In his lab a million degrees is not unknown and forty million probable. Arthur Eddington made the statement recently that "forty million degrees is, perhaps, not beyond attainment." "At Cav-
endish Laboratory," Eddington says, "Dr. Kapitza produces momentary magnetic fields in which the concentration of energy corresponds to about a million degrees Centi-grade. If he should be able to raise this to forty million—well, I don't really think subatomic energy will come pouring out; but, just to be on the safe side, I shall take care not to be too near the laboratory when the experiment is tried."There is enough energy in a drop of water," says Eddington, "to furnish two hundred horsepower for a year. Instead of pampering the appetites of our engines with coal or oil we shall induce them to work on a plain diet of subatomic energy."Trucks and trains will disappear and a year's supply of fuel for a station—thirty grams of water—can be carried in a tea cup.
Scientific research into the various problems with which the producers of crops have to deal is on the move at a rapid pace much along the same lines. Too many farmers, however, are clinging tenaciously to old traditional methods. Others are moving slowly but surely along the road of progress. All are anxious for better and more profitable methods in the selection of seed, the cultivation of the soil, the harvesting and the sale of the crop. For the purpose of making better and surer progress still large numbers of scientific agronomists and practical farmers from all over the world are arranging to meet in conference at Regina in 1932.
It looks now as if this will be the means of giving to the agricultural industry the biggest boost ever.Scientists have not yet been able to produce rain at a time when farmers think that crops require moisture. They have, however, discovered some wonderful things along this line. Dr. Compton, the 1927 Nobel Prize winner in physics, says that, "by observing the diameter of the halo round the moon we can estimate the size of water drops which cause it. A shrinking halo means a growing drop and hence probable rain."

TEACHERS WAGE FIGHT
TO REGAIN CLAUSEAMENDED SCHOOL ACT DELET-
ING CONTRACT PROTECTION
ROUSES STORM

EDMONTON—Climaxing discussion which lasted through the three-
day session of the Alberta Educational Association, and was the principal
item on the agenda of the Alberta
Teachers' Alliance general annual meeting, the Teachers' Alliance accused the action of the government on the teacher's contracts clause repeal
in a resolution passed last Wednesday evening.

The motion presented by H. D.
A. May and preceded by a two-hour discussion at the meeting, reads as follows:

"Whereas, clause six of teachers' contracts, providing for five full days' notice of meetings called for the purpose of terminating such contracts has been repealed without valid reason therefor;

"And whereas, the aforementioned clause has operated as a reasonable
guarantee of security of tenure,
equally fair to both school boards
and teachers;

"And whereas, many differences
between school boards and teachers
have been settled to the mutual advantage of both parties, by direct negotiation during the five-day period, before the board has committed itself by taking definite action;

"Therefore be it resolved, that this alliance in general annual meeting
assembled, protests most emphatically
the action of the government in removing the said clause from the contracts and in refusing to incorporate the said clause in the amended School Act;

"And be it further resolved, that
the incoming executive of this alliance be instructed to use every legitimate means in its power for securing the early enactment of a repealed clause in the School Act."

Heated debate from the floor and platform preceded the passing of the resolution.

Appearing before a joint meeting
of the Alberta Teachers' Alliance
and the Alberta Educational Association at the afternoon session, Hon.
Perren E. Baker, minister of education, issued a statement in reply to criticism directed at Premier Brownlee by A.T.A. delegates Monday, and at the same time stressed what he declared to be beneficial features of the new School Act for teachers.

The minister in his statement declared emphatically that the premier
had said nothing that could have given the slightest ground for supposing
him to be in favor of the contention

of a "cold war" between the government and the teachers. He further pointed to "apparent misconception" of the changes
in the act, stating that further protection is given teachers by changing the clause.

REGINA RESIDENTS GET
NO NATURAL GASFRANCHISE FOR MOORE INTER-ESTS TURNED DOWN FLAT
BY BIG MAJORITY

Coal operators of Alberta and Saskatchewan showed their political strength by defeating the natural gas franchise proposed to be issued by the city of Regina to C. O. Moore of the Tri-Cities Utilities company.

The people of Regina want natural gas. The price of coal is high and its citizens maintain that no city of 65,000 should be without either natural or artificial gas. There is no city in the United States of a population of more than 12,000 without gas; they pointed out.

Three proposals were considered by the council of Regina. One was to pipe gas from Turner Valley—a $17-000,000 project. Another was to pipe
gas from Kinross, near Edmonton,
about half as far, and the third was
to take gas from Bowdoin dome, in Montana, a distance of 176 miles and
by far the closest source.

A gas expert employed by the city
advised that the Turner Valley project would result in too high prices
for gas, considering the investment.
He recommended the Kinross gas
but the province of Alberta refused to allow this gas to be exported to the neighbor province on the grounds
that this gas was needed as a reserve
for Edmonton. The remaining project was the Bowdoin source. C. O. Moore was given a right to ask the people for a franchise. His was the Kinross project but he arranged for Bowdoin
gas with the failure of the former.

Meantime, he had been defeated
in Saskatoon where the coal operators had conducted a tremendous campaign against him. The coal men are reported to have spent large sums of money in advertising and in employing an army of workers
against the gas project. This organization was turned loose in Regina
and the franchise measure was beaten by a vote of 2974 to 2319.

UMISK ENCAMPMENT I.O.O.F.
ENTERTAIN OFFICIALS

The members of Umisk Encampment No. 4, I.O.O.F. were honored
on Thursday evening last by a visit from Grand Encampment officials in the persons of Mr. Dave Wilson, of Edmonton, and Mr. W. Huntingford, grand scribe and grand high priest
respectively of the Order in Alberta.

During the evening, Pat. P. H.
Perry, of Chauvin, read his commission for 1931 as D.D.G.P., and was officially recognized.

Much business regarding encampment matters was on the agenda, and speeches were given by the visitors
to the interest and delight of all, and at the close a sumptuous lunch was served up in the usual good style of the local patriarchy. In fact "a good time was had by all."

Educational-Mack Sennett Talking
Comedy, "Fat Wives For Thin" coming to the theatre this week.

The veteran comedy maker has incorporated a powerful lesson as well
as innumerable laughs in this latest farce which deals with dieting.

plump wife who finds that eating often and plenty is one of the joys of her existence. George Barrard is the husband who admires the trim, athletic type of girl, but who eventually decides that it doesn't really matter
whether one's wife is plump or slim
if he still loves her.

Mack Sennett personally directed
the entire production.

KING TUT WHEAT IS A REVIVAL OF OLD SWINDLE

Inquiries have been made at the University regarding King Tut wheat which is supposed to have come from the tomb of Tutankhamen at Luxor Egypt. It might be frankly stated that this is pure "bunk." There is not the slightest possibility of such ancient wheat germinating today. This King Tut wheat is nothing more than a revival of the old swindle game of selling undesirable wheat, together
with much misinformation to unsuspecting farmers. The wheat is usually known as Egyptian, and belong to the class Triticum turgidum.
In the seed trade it is sometimes known as Alaska, Miracle, Seven-Headed, Egyptian Wonder and now as King Tut. Every few years
some unscrupulous individuals seem to revive the old variety under a new name and sell it at exorbitant prices.

Egyptian wheat is easily distinguished by its branched head. This character gives it the appearance of being very productive, but as a matter of fact it does not yield as well
as the commonly grown varieties of good bread wheats. It is of very poor milling and baking quality; for bread-making it is very undesirable.

If Egyptian wheat or any other wheats of the same type were grown to any extent in Alberta it would have a most depressing effect on both the local and foreign markets. Our export grain containing mixtures of such varieties would have lower milling and baking qualities as well as commercial grade. High and uniform in Canada an export grain is now more necessary than ever, since
the struggle in the world grain markets grows more severe every year

NEW DELIGHT IN
CRACKERS AND CHEESE

Cheese is a historic and romantic food. The shepherds of Palestine, the Pyramid builders of Egypt, the soldiers of Charlemagne, all ate cheese
as the principal part of their diet.

Toasted Cheese Wafers are delightful to serve with a light salad
or with coffee when friends come in for the evening. Here is the best way to prepare them:

Sprinkle the surface of soda crackers with grated cheese. Place on a flat baking sheet or shallow pan and bake in a very hot oven until the cheese is well browned. Do not let the cheese cook or it will become tough. Serve immediately.

TO STUDY NEW
FARM INDUSTRIES

EDMONTON—Formation of a committee to investigate various problems in connection with industrialization of agriculture will be announced
shortly by Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture, it was learned here. Howard Stutchbury, provincial trade commissioner; J. F. Andrew, assistant deputy minister of agriculture, and E. L. Gray, field crops commissioner, are likely to comprise the board.

This action follows an intimation
by the minister during the recent session of the legislature that more attention would be paid by the government to development of a number of promising sidelines of the farming industry which holds industrial possibilities.

MANY EMPLOYEES

TO BE DISMISSED

OTTAWA—The situation with respect to projected reductions in the personnel of the department of the interior is still uncertain, it was intimated here today. While it is clear
a large number of the staff will be dismissed, due to the diminution of the duties now performed by the department as a consequence of the transference of the natural resources
to the western provinces, no definite decision has yet been made as to who will go and who will be retained. This cannot long be delayed
however, and officials said that "notices may go out almost any time
now."

What Shall We Name The Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY
CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each new baby that comes into the world is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search through directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

No. 53—LOUISE HOMER
OPERA SINGER

My favorite names for children are those of my two youngest children, Hester and Joy. These are the names.

ISRAEL is a name of Hebrew origin meaning "champion of God." It is the name of a character in the Bible. It is a general name given to the Jewish race. Israel Zangwill was an English writer of note. CORA is a name of Greek origin meaning "Maiden." It is a popular Irish name. Its diminutives are Corinna and Corrinne. "Corinna Goes A-Maying" is a poem by Herrick.

REFRESHING EATS FOR THIS WEEK (BY BETTY BARCLAY)

COCOA AND CHOCOLATE IDEAS

Few except very smart hostesses have realized the hundreds of original recipe uses for cocoa and chocolate. Yet chocolate is one of the world's favorite flavors, if not the unrivalled favorite. And cocoa and chocolate are renowned for their health-giving properties. Here are two recipes to start you thinking:

Cocoa Charlotte Russe
2 tablespoons cocoa
1 teaspoon gelatine
2 cups whipped cream
1/2 cup powdered sugar
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoonful vanilla
lady fingers
Soften the gelatine in cold water, dissolve over hot water, add cocoa, stir until well dissolved, add sugar, cool, fold in whipped cream, and flavor with vanilla. Line a serving dish with lady fingers, fill with the cream, chill and serve. Guaranteed to make any mouth water.

Chocolate Molasses Drop Cakes

1/3 cupful butter
1/3 cupful sugar
1/3 cupful molasses
1 egg
1 ounce bitter chocolate
1 scant teaspoonful baking powder
7/8 cupful flour
1/2 cupful chopped nut meats
Cream butter and sugar, add molasses and chocolate which has been melted over water, mix well, sift flour with baking powder, add to first mixture with well-beaten egg, beat vigorously, stir in nuts and drop from end of spoon on buttered and floured tins. Bake in moderate oven.

2 tablespoons lemon junket
2 tablespoons vanilla junket
1 cup whole milk
1 cup light cream

WATCH YOUR HANDS

Disease germs are the cause of a large percentage of all illness. If we could keep these germs out of our bodies, they could do us no harm, because all the mischief they do to us occurs after they get inside our bodies. They usually gain entrance through the mouth; in other words, we eat them or drink them. Our ability to keep out disease germs lies very largely in our own hands, and this is meant literally and not figuratively. Our own hands are, unless we take proper care of them, the means whereby many germs are carried past our lips into a nice warm moist body where germs delight to be.

As we go about our daily work or play, our hands are sure to become soiled. Because of the uses to which we put our hands, it follows inevitably that they become dirty or soiled. They are contaminated with germs, some of which may be disease germs. There is no harm in having germs on your hands as long as they stay there. The unbroken skin prevents any germs from entering. In that way, the danger of having germs on your hands is that they may be carried into your mouth or nose.

This happens if you put your unwashed hands to your face, bite your finger nails or moisten your fingers with saliva to turn the pages of a book or magazine. If food is touched with the unwashed fingers and then eaten, the effect is just the same as if the fingers had been put directly into the mouth. We can avoid practically all of the very real dangers that confront us from these causes by paying attention to two simple but very important points.

The first is that we should keep our hands away from our faces. The only time unwashed hands need to go near the face is when the handkerchief is used. Some people keep touching their faces with their hands and so there is danger. Watch yourself and see how often you put your hands to your face, then make up your mind to stop the practice.

The second point is that before you touch food before you eat, your hands need to be thoroughly washed. After washing, remember to use your own towel. This is just as important as the washing. Common towels spread germs from one user to the next, and they should never be used. Washing your hands before eating is one of the most practical and simple ways of preventing disease.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

1 cup orange pulp and juice
Whip cream until thick, fold in other ingredients. Serve cold.

ECONOMICAL DESSERTS

Dainty, delicious and healthful desserts do not necessarily call for great expenditures of money. Here are two inexpensive dishes that will please the most fastidious:

Fig and Rice Conde
1/2 cup rice
2 cups milk
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg
4 figs
Cook rice, milk, sugar and salt in double-boiler until rice is tender. Add beaten egg and chopped figs, remove from fire and flavor. Turn into small molds which have been buttered and dredged in sugar. Set away in warm place until firm. Chill. Unmold when ready to serve, surround with apricot sauce, garnish with whipped cream topped with a fig.

Meringue of Rice
Put a cupful of rice into a pint of boiling water, and when the water has boiled away add a pint of milk, a piece of butter the size of an egg, four eggs, and the grated rind of a lemon. Butter a pudding dish, pour in the mixture and bake until it sets. Beat the whites until dry add half a cup of sugar and a tablespoon of lemon juice. When pudding is done spread the frosting over it and brown light on top.

SLATS' DIARY

By Ross Farquhar
Friday—well I got a job tending to Mrs. Pelt's yard for her all spring and summer like spading up the flower beds and raking the leaves and ect. but Mildred which is her dotter is always hanging round and tawking about kissing and flirting with boys and what a nice looking boy I am and ect. But I guess I will half to worry along sum how becuz as pa says jobs is jobs and m'tey scarce to get now days.

Saturday—well I made half of $ today working for Mrs. Pelt's but had to kiss Mildred to get rid of her one or to times and I found a pair of boxing gloves in the attic and all so a old fashioned Stikata like they use in Italy and Vendetta and I wish some I wood try to ensult me now.

Sunday—Ant Emmy was sick today so that was a Xcuse to stay away from ch rch. The Dr. cum and looked down her throte with a telescope and sed she had a cute Bronkittus but Ant Emmy says the chances is that he tells all his patence stuff like that. Doctors is very fickle so may ant rimarks.

Munday—Ant Emmy has ben reasing and wise it meby dont do her so very much good she at lease found sum thing today. She use to al ways think a Military Brush was a little sternish between soldiers of are country and the enemy.

Tuesday—well the teacher told the principal on me today about putting chg. gum in the girls hair and he gave me a hanning and then pulled a ole Gog about it hirting him wise then me, but I not sed he went and set down like all ways.

Wednesday—Ma give me a scolding becuz I lost 4 thum tax from my drawing board. I found all but I of them and they dont cost much I herd pa hollering and kinda cussing when he was a going to bed so I guess he found the uther 1.

Thursday—I picked up a womans purse today with she dropped in front of the 10 per cent. store and she give me a quarter. you cild tell she was rich from the way she smelt.

NOW IS THE TIME TO INSPECT CAR THOROUGHLY

This is the time of year motor car owners should take inventory of their automobiles to learn how many more miles of economical operation their cars possess and decide on the advisability of purchasing a new car. Such an inventory will reduce up-keep costs and eliminate future disappointments to thousands of motorists, according to Oldsmobile engineers. "In the spring every automobile owner should have his car thoroughly overhauled to prepare for summer driving," they say. "At that time he should obtain facts and figures to learn if it is more economical to have his car put in first class shape for another year's service or to purchase a new car. Among the factors to be considered are age, mileage, mechanical condition and appearance. Total mileage is an important consideration but it is influenced by the condition in which the car has been kept.

Automatic control for an airplane is provided by an "iron skull" which manipulates the controls with or without the aid of a human pilot.

How Much Do You Know? (By Wm. Hammett)

Answers to the questions on Page 2

1. In Doorn castle in Holland.
2. The rupee. It is worth about thirty-seven cents.
3. A new type of heavier-than-air craft. Instead of relying on wings as does the aeroplane, its lifting force is embodied in four large blades which rotate whenever the autogyro moves. The pressure of the air makes this rotation a certainty—the rotation being quite independent of the engine.
4. The Eskimos.
5. The boll weevil. Great swarms of ladybugs have been imported to exterminate this pest.
6. Omar's ancient fortress in Algeria. It overlooks the Mediterranean and played a prominent part in the Roman occupation after the fall of Carthage. Later the Moors used it as a base for operation against Spain. It is over twenty centuries old.
7. A convention, under League of Nations auspices, of delegates from all parts of the world to consider calendar reform. Its aim is to make our months of equal length, to have each week day fall on the same day of the month, and to fix the date of Good Friday, Easter, etc.
8. Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street", "Babbitt", etc.
9. Japan.
10. Hamilton.

ARE YOU 50 YEARS OLD OR YOUNG?

TRADITION ONCE PLAYED AN IMPORTANT PART IN BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS, BECAUSE THE FOUNDER OF A BUSINESS HAD INSTITUTED CERTAIN PRACTISES TWENTY, THIRTY OR FORTY YEARS AGO, HIS SUCCESSORS SEEMED TO FEEL THAT THEY WERE IN DUTY BOUND TO HONOR THE HOARY CUSTOMS BY CONSTANT USE. OF COURSE THE RAPID FIRE CHANGES IN PUBLIC TASTES AND DEMANDS IN THE PAST CENTURY, AND MORE PARTICULARLY IN THE LAST DECADE, SETTLED THE QUESTION DEFINITELY; THE POLICIES WERE CHANGED TO MEET MODERN DEMANDS OR THE BUSINESS FOLLOWED ANCIENT CUSTOMS INTO OBLIVION.

NO BUSINESS EXECUTIVE TODAY WOULD ATTEMPT TO MEET HIS CLIENT (NOR ALLOW HIS REPRESENTATIVE TO) CLAD IN THE GARB OF THE '90s. THEN WHY ALLOW BUSINESS STATIONERY WHICH IS YOUR PRINTED REPRESENTATIVE, TO INTERVIEW HUNDREDS OF BUSINESS ASSOCIATES EVERY MONTH IN THE SAME OLD "DRESS," SIMPLY BECAUSE "ITS BEEN THAT WAY FOR YEARS."

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Canadian National Recreation Association wish to announce that the TENNIS COURTS at the Station will be open to members of Tennis Club for playing on Saturday, April 11th.

Club Fees for 1931 will be as follows:— Gents $2.50. Ladies $1.50, High School Students 75c. plus one dollar for Membership Ticket in the C.N.R.A., provided you are not already in possession of your ticket. See Secretary, Mr C. E. Callas, or chairman of tennis, Mr T. Lissimore.

HORSESHOE PITCHING COURTS are now ready for the use of all members of the Association. Mr P. E. Wiley is the chairman of Horseshoes Committee.

Sets of special light weight ladies horseshoes have been procured and the intention is to start a ladies horseshoe pitching club. This is a healthy, entertaining and not over strenuous form of outdoor sport.

SOFTBALL equipment is on hand and this game will be started just as soon as the ground dries sufficiently for a suitable site to be laid out. Mr F. Morris is the chairman of Softball.

MEMBERSHIP in the Canadian National Recreation Association only costs One Dollar and anyone can join. Get your ticket and help encourage clean sports in your town.

Mrs Sneddon, of Lumsden, Sask., who has been wintering at the coast stayed here over the week end to visit her brother Dr H. Wallace on her homeward journey.

The new marble deposit on the Canadian National Railway near Hodgson, Manitoba, between Lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba, has shown a record of great progress. Miss E. Kemp of the post office staff journeyed to North Battleford last week for a visit to friends there.

The Dominion parliament met again on Monday last, after an Easter recess since March 31st.

Tonight (Wednesday) is the annual "At Home" of the local Oddfellows and the usual good time is promised to all. Tickets including supper are only: Gents, 75c; ladies 50c. Get there early and have all the fun. Coultman's orchestra will provide the music.

The dust and wind storms of last week certainly make the need of a good rainfall all the more pronounced. The town gardeners are busy these evenings, too; and if the authorities will see to it that the lanes, etc. get their annual clear-up forth with, things will soon be ship-shape and much more healthy!

Mr and Mrs H. Kemp spent a few days visiting their daughter in Biggar last week.

Mr Mason Steel is in town visiting his parents while on his annual holidays.

Three Live Women Walked for them, so did three live cops, and their three live problems solved with three thousand laughs, Three Live Ghosts.

Quite a large number enjoyed the repeat offering of the sacred cantata "Life Eternal" which was put on again by the choir of the United church on Sunday evening last.

Owing to the unusual amount of sickness which has prevailed all winter, and the dry and dusty state of everything in this neck of the woods it certainly behooves every household to see to it that their premises are cleaned up without delay. The provincial health inspector who was in town last week is demanding, too, that the lanes be given their annual Spring clean-up. Get rid of your winter's accumulation of rubbish and have it hauled away!

Quite a number of our farmers went on the land at the end of last week and with a few days seedling will be general throughout the district we learn.

Don't miss the good show at the Elks dance every Saturday night at the Masonic Hall from 9 till 12.

Miss Lucy Withnell is now again teaching at her school at Kitecoty.

Mr O. Murray during the past week has moved his family into the Bud Cotton cottage on Fifth avenue east.

Mr Maloney, of the Commercial Life Insurance Co. was in town for a few days this week.

While returning to his home at Hope Valley in his car last week, Mr John Black, sr., had a nasty accident whereby his car turned over a couple of times, and is badly wrecked in the front portion. It seems that his accelerator stuck just as he wished to slow up for a mud hole, and the car did not diminish speed. By a real miracle Mr Black was uninjured although badly shook up, and was able to walk home after getting out of the wrecked car.

Positively the funniest and most appealing of all dramatic farces. You'll fall in love with each "Live Ghost" three times over.
